

SALE OF TURKEYS HEAVIEST KNOWN

Dealers Report Increase of
More Than One-third
Over Last Year.

HIGH PRICES DUE TO WARM WEATHER

Easy Market at Christmas Time
Anticipated As Result of the Thanksgiving Business.

With every produce house, wholesale and retail, in Washington, reporting that its sale of turkeys ranged from one-third to a half more than last year, dealers today without exception, declare that the turkey trade this Thanksgiving was the heaviest ever experienced on the local market.

One firm, which has been operating on Louisiana avenue for thirty years, and is one of the largest poultry houses on the market, reported that in the two days preceding Thanksgiving, it disposed of $10,000 worth of turkeys, principally at retail, to local consumers. This amount was fully one-third more than that brought in through the firm's sales last year. And last year was the banner year of the concern's twenty-nine years.

Unanimous Opinion.

A round of the poultry markets this morning brought the same story from every proprietor.

"Absolutely the best Thanksgiving turkey market Washington has ever known," declared one dealer.

"The high price the fowls went, the more they seemed to be in demand, and they easily could have commanded higher prices," said another.

"The turkey trade this week has convinced me absolutely that times are becoming prosperous, and there is more money in the country than is generally believed," continued a third.

Practically all dealers take the view that there will be an easy market on fowls at Christmas. Experience teaches, they declare, that a stiff Thanksgiving market makes an easy Christmas market, and vice versa.

In speaking of the unusual market of the week, D. P. Collins, a large produce dealer on Tenth street, this morning said:

Increase of $1,000.

"My accounts show that I sold more than $2,000 worth of turkeys, principally at retail, during Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. This is fully $1,000 more than the amount I realized from last year's sales. Some of my wholesale customers duplicated their orders two and three times before they were able to satisfy their retail trade."

"The high price on the fowls seemed to make them all the more in demand, and practically no objection was made to the stiff quotations. Apparently, every person wanted a turkey and had the money to pay for it. In my opinion it will be a long time before Washington ever experiences another such market, if ever."

George E. Burns, of the Kalorama Market, put in his Thanksgiving for the birds, making it slightly heavier than last year's, as he figured demand would be heavier. When the fowls were delivered he disposed of them so rapidly that he had to put in a second order, which was nearly as large as the first. This consignment also disappeared, and Mr. Burns was forced to order a third lot before he finally was able to meet the heavy retail demand.

Due to Warm Weather.

The one reason assigned for the stiff market is that the warm weather which prevailed last week, when Thanksgiving shipments were being prepared, necessitated an advance in price, in view of the risk incurred in making shipments at that time. The increased price had, to be maintained all along, until the turkeys finally became the property of consumers, as wholesalers were forced to protect themselves, after paying warm-weather-risk prices, and retailers likewise.

Last year, at this time, turkeys were much cheaper, and consumers delighted themselves upon what gave promise of being an easy Christmas market. By Christmas, however, prices had soared to almost unprecedented heights. Unless the market tradition, which Christmas prices this year, dealers say, will be cheaper than they were Thanksgiving, it is pretty well settled that there are plenty of fowls in the country, and with demand slightly decreased, through yesterday's heavy consumption, it is believed prices will be gauged accordingly.

The heavy Thanksgiving trade practically depleted the stock of turkeys on the market, and with supply none too heavy today, the firm prices continued to be maintained, and dealers say doubtless will be through the rest of the week.

CATCHES BIG BIRD AFTER HARD FIGHT

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 26.—Dr. I. W. Weinberg today sent to the Philadelphia zoo a large bird of the crane type which he captured in his yard after a hard battle in which the bird effectively used beak and claws on him. He finally stunned it with a club and effected its capture. The bird stands four feet in height.

CORONER DECIDES ACCIDENT CAUSED PATRILLO'S DEATH

Italian Boy Crushed by Gear
Chain of Big Auto
Truck.

Accidental death is the official verdict rendered today in the case of Tony Patrillo, the eleven-year-old boy who died last night from the result of injuries received while attempting to steal a ride on a big auto truck yesterday afternoon.

Coroner Nevitt viewed the body at the Casualty Hospital this morning and, after hearing the evidence of the policemen who had investigated the case and the companions of young Patrillo, issued a certificate of accidental death.

The boy was playing in the street near North Capitol street and Massachusetts avenue with a few companions. The auto truck was moving slowly along Massachusetts avenue.

Calling to his friends to follow him, the boy leaped onto the truck. His leg was caught in the brake chain, and before the driver could stop the machine the leg was crushed in such a manner that it was severed from the body. The boy was removed to the Casualty Hospital, where he died late last night.

He was a son of Antonio Patrillo, of 26 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

PITIFUL ROMANCE OF YOUNG WOMAN ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Went to Philadelphia Searching
For Employment—Her Death
Is Suspicious.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—The pitiful romance of a beautiful young woman who came here to better her position, only to die under alleged suspicious circumstances after she had struggled for a month to secure work, was barred to day when Dr. J. M. Lewis reported her death to the coroner.

Coroner's detectives are making a searching investigation into the circumstances of the death, and attending her death, and hint that they may make an important arrest before nightfall. A young man, said to be a member of a wealthy family, is alleged to have been with the young woman up to a late hour last night, when she was stricken with the fatal illness.

The unfortunate woman's name is Miss Rae Boyd, and she made her home at the Vendome apartments. She told a few persons that her former home was in Trenton, N. J., and that she had lived there with her father, Charles Boyd, on Emory street.
